Katherine Ryan Died in Agony, Science Contradicts Testimony

Dolores Hoyer's Story of Girl's Last Hours Disputed by Medical Experts.

DOCTOR IS HELD

DOVER, N. H., Sept. 12.—In an endeavor to secure the release of Dr. Harry H. Skagpole, who has been held for the grand jury on the charge of causing the death of Miss Katherine Ryan, his attorney, Hon. John Kivell, today makes application before a justice of the superior court that the accused physician be admitted to bail. Should the petition be favorably considered, Dr. Skagpole will probably regain his freedom early next week.

Dr. Skagpole went to court yesterday with the same calmness that he has displayed ever since he was arrested. He waited from the jail to the courthouse, a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile, stopping now and then to chat with friends who stopped him on the way.

"Feeling pretty well, doctor," some one asked him.

"As well as could be expected under the circumstances," answered the physician, smiling. "If it weren't for this rheumatism leg of mine I believe I would feel fine."

Pretty Witnesses There.

When Dr. Skagpole reached the courtroom he found already there, his housekeeper, Miss Dolores Hoyer, who had been summoned by the state as a witness, but who was not called by County Solicitor Hall. Miss Loretta Habbit, the nearest friend of Katherine Ryan, and the dead girl's aunt, Mrs. Charles Graham of Lowell. Mrs. Graham was the only one called upon to testify and her statement was limited to the mere fact that she identified the body in an undertaker's shop as that of her niece.

It didn't take long to conclude the hearing of Dr. Skagpole's case. The two jurors who performed the duty, Dr. George A. Tolman, the deputy medical referee, and Dr. Nish B. Sullivan, both testified in finding that the girl's death was due to septic peritonitis and that this was caused, in their opinion, by illegal surgery.

They brought out the fact that for several hours before her death the girl must have been very ill, must have suffered agony that was excruciating. Dr. Tolman said that he had been told by Dr. Skagpole that on the Friday before her death, Miss Hoyer says it was 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon when he found the body that was in his office in the house of Dr. Skagpole. He found the body that was in his office in the house of Dr. Skagpole. He found the body that was in his office in the house of Dr. Skagpole.

Although he argued that no case had been made out against the physician, Attorney Kivell was unable to secure his client's discharge.

Ryan a Listener.

While Dr. Skagpole's case was being heard, Ernest E. Ryan, the dead girl's father, who is held on the charge of being an accessory, listened intently to the present details of the surgeon's story. Once he asked that he might be allowed to step into the fresh air for a moment, but that was all. Miss Hoyer, too, had to be released from the courtroom. She had to go to her home and attend to her own affairs. She was the only one who was allowed to leave the courtroom.

BALLOON AIDS FRENCH ARMY WHIP MOORS

Attack on Hidden Camp in Hills Follows Observations Made from Height.

NATIVES LOSE HEAVILY

CARABLANCA, Sept. 12.—Efficient service is being rendered the French forces in the Moroccan campaign by a new weapon, the observation made from it leading to the discovery of a Moroccan camp of 500 men at Taddert, in the hills some 10 miles from Casablanca.

As soon as the discovery was reported, the French detachments marched out, shelling the camp and driving the troops and disarming the natives. The French loss was one killed and six wounded.

During the fight the Moors tried to make a rapid retreat, but the attacking forces, with the object of cutting them off and surrounding a portion of the killed men, but the attempt utterly failed, largely as a result of the rapid advance of the independent columns, whose movements were not hindered by the Moors, who fled upon the first trap was laid.

When notified from a long line of Moors the Moors retreated from Taddert, leaving many of them lying under the guns of the French, at another of the camps the Moors disappeared among the hills.

When the Moors saw their camp in flames they set fire to all the farms and towns which they could reach, and soon a country of smoking ruins spread before the French. The French are now in the process of rebuilding and repairing the damage done by the Moors.

DEMAND $2,000 FOR RETURN OF LITTLE BOY

"Black Hand" Holds Child For Nearly a Month While Parents Mourn.

POLICE SEARCH IN VAIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(Specialist) New York police have been steadily at work on the case, and although a reward of $200 has been offered in a distorted manner for the return of her boy, no trace has yet been found of five-year-old Nicholas Thomas, whom strange men led away from his home on Aug. 10.

In all, five letters have been received from the kidnappers. In each one they demand a ransom for the return of the boy. Every succeeding letter has raised the amount to be given, until now the sum asked to give up the child for less than $2,000.

The Thomas family cannot afford to pay any such sum, and the police have been busy holding up their fingers with the kidnappers.

It is the hope of the police that the boy will be turned over as other kidnapped children have been, after the time and cry has died down and the kidnappers find that the parents will not pay.

However, the mother and father of this "lost boy" are nearly distracted over their misfortune. The boy was an unusually little fellow and well known and loved on the block where he lived.

On the evening of Aug. 10, the kidnapper was taking in the street with the other boys, when a well-dressed stranger came to him.

"Come with me, I will take you to your father," he said, and Nicholas went with him willingly.

The boy's father owns a bookbindery in front of the London Theatre, on the Bowery, and in the neighborhood is reported to be well-to-do.

As soon as the kidnapping was known, the police were notified and went to work on the case. Letters began to come from the kidnappers.

The police went after each letter for the kidnapers, but on the more and could not find out the man who had taken the boy. The boy if the money did not come.

Now the mother is desperate and has offered $200 reward for the return of her boy. Whether it will be effective or not remains to be seen. Every effort is now being made by the detectives to turn up some new clues in the mystery.

Women—You Poor
Wretched Slaves

Why Do You Let Them Pluck You,
and Squeeze You, and Suck You, and Haul You, and CAN'T YOU BE NATURAL?

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal Editors

With the announcement of the Autumn fashions begin the worries and sufferings of poor, unhappy, foolish women. The shoemaker comes along and tells women that they are to wear VERY POINTED SHOES. Just as women had got their toes nicely spread out in broad, sensible walking boots, the fashion kings, who want them to spend more money and throw away old things still good, announce the foolish pointed toe.

We have published one article by a doctor explaining the harm that these pointed shoes do. Added to the idiotic high heel, they actually menace the health of women. They deform the foot, stop circulation, injure the heart, interfere with digestion.

But all that is of no importance, in the eyes of many women, compared with the great joy of having the tip of the foot a little more like a toothpick than some other woman's foot. How is it possible to account for such folly?

When the man who rules the fashions for women's unhappy feet has announced his toothpick, high-heeled plan along comes the other fashion authority, who tells women how much room is to be allowed them for their livers and their lungs, and their machinery of life.

This arbiter of waist and hips and general shape says to the women this Fall: "Ladies, you are to be slimmer. Your waists are to be smaller, your hips are to be narrower. If there is an ounce of fat left on your arms or necks or anywhere else you are to get it off."

Do you suppose the women laugh at this nonsense? Not a bit of it. Immediately, beginning with the poor, round fat ones all out of breath, all the way down to those that are too slim already, THEY ALL BEGIN RUINING THEIR VITALITY TRYING TO GET OFF MORE FAT.

They run, they eat too little, they take atrocious banting medicines, they wrap their poor flesh up in tight rubber bands, getting rid of tissue by the simple process of strangling it.

And when they have got their faces worn and their eyes hollow, when they have taken a little bit off of their waists and hips, and a great deal off of their lives, they feel happy.

What poor geese!

There is one union that we need badly in this country, and that is "The Woman's Common Sense Union for Self-Defense."

All these atrocities of fashion are simply the effort of scheming minds to get more money out of women. If a woman bought a good dress last year, the idea is to put it out of fashion by changing the sleeves, or the waist, or something else, thus making her get another dress.

A sensible woman with a sensible shape as nature intended it can go to any good, sensible store and get a dress in which she looks all right, but if you say to a woman made like a sponge cake that she must make herself look like an hour glass, tucked in at the middle, she has got to go to some peculiar "artist," who will ruin her health for her while making her look fashionable.

Men with their criticisms ought to encourage women to free themselves from the stupid slavery of corsets, high heels, pointed shoes and everlasting banting. They should talk to women around them in this way:

"My poor, deluded goose, don't you know that a woman shaped like a match should be pitted and not imitated?"

"Don't you know that woman was never intended to be as narrow across the hips as a jumping kangaroo? Nature knew what she was about when she made women growing wider and wider, like an onion, from the feet up. And woman plays the part of a goose when she interferes and tries to make herself over in the shape of a shoestring?"

Nature knew where a woman's lungs and liver and heart and other arrangements ought to be. Woman should know better than to go against them out of place. It is hideous enough to see an African woman pulling her lip out of inches, sticking great pieces of bone through her women do to themselves is far more harmful and far more harmful to their children than what the savage women do.

The woman that amounts to something is the woman who lets her shape alone, and does her attention to improving her brain. If you could see one of the world's great women you would see a woman of natural shape.

In the mother of Napoleon you would see a woman vigorous, strong, with hips pretty nearly as wide as a double bed, AND PROUD OF THEM.

In the mother of Lincoln you would see a tall, gaunt, bony woman, with a strong face, with a waist as wide as it was intended to be, with her energy saved for HER SON and not frittered away on fashion.

The worst of woman's folly is that the poor thing puts on all the idiotic trimmings and squeezes and tortures herself, thinking that it pleases men. And the man doesn't even see it, or if he sees it he despises it.

If a woman wants to prance up and down the street, gazed after by strangers as a kind of curiosity, it is well enough for her to confine to a waltz, a kangaroo's hips and a fawn's foot with a dress like a peacock's tail and a head very much like that of the peacock.

The sensible woman who wants to do something, and to interest a man who AMOUNTS to something, will do well to drop the foolish dress, the waist squeezers and give Nature a chance—carry around enough fat to keep her nerves in good order and allow some reserve for the work of life when she begins to do her duty by giving good children to the world.

We have talked this way before, and we shall talk in the same way again over and over until we see some signs of common sense in American fashions.

Why cannot women and fashion makers be satisfied with crazy colors—pink, red, green, purple, orange, blue, yellow, mouse-color, and heaven knows what else—without insisting upon destroying also their anatomy? Paint the lily if you must, but don't squeeze its roots or choke the life sap out of it.
